Men who went down to the sea in ships

March-April, 1941

THE BATTLE OF THE ATLANTIC As Hitler threatened, Nazi efforts to cut Britain's lifeline reached their climax in the spring. In spite of heavy losses from U-boats and surface raiders, food and munitions still poured into Britain. The pictures show: top, a motor launches surround a convoy as it steams down the English Channel; below, the look-out of a destroyer scans the sea for possible enemy submarines.

187. Direction-finders on board. Instruments for observing the bearing of any radio signal can be received by the direction-finder (Fig. 187) by utilizing the directional characteristics of loop antenna. The edge of the antenna loop points toward the transmitter. The maximum strength will be received. If the loop be adjusted in the direction whence come the signals, they will be at a maximum. As the null point can be determined accurately that the bearing of the instrument is placed and the signal is directed toward the bearing of the ship. The bearing of the ship is then found by subtracting the compass course from the bearing read from the direction-finder.*

FIG. 187. RADIO DIRECTION-FINDER.

Like other instruments, the direction-finder on board a ship is subject to certain conditions, the operator's skill, and the navigator's interpretation of the readings.

* For more complete discussion of Operation and Calibration of Direction-finders, see "Instructions for the Operation of Direction-finding Equipment" (37 pp., price 10 cents from Superintendent of Documents, D. C.).

Hijikata's dialogue for the performance of Bugs Crawl
(from a note of one of his own pupils)

A bug is crawling on the back of your right hand,

A second bug is creeping down from your left side of your neck to your back,

A third bug is wriggling up along your inner thigh,

A fourth bug is squirming down from your left shoulder to your chest,

A fifth bug ...

Ah, where is it ?

You're so itchy, here and there. You can't stand still.

Itchiness is shoving you all around,

Itchiness under your chin, itchiness at the base of your ears, itchiness around your elbows, itchiness around your kneecaps, itchiness around your waist,

Ah! There're five-hundred of them!

Around your eyes, around your mouth, in your ears, between your fingers, in every mucous membrane

Five thousand bugs

A bug on every hair,

A bug in every pore,

From there two hundred thousand bugs are crawling down into your guts and drilling them voraciously,

Having eaten them up the bugs are coming out of your body through the pores,

There are very many people who read simply to prevent themselves from thinking.

Notebook D, aphorism 96

To do the opposite of something is also a form of imitation, namely an imitation of its opposite.

Notebook E, aphorism 65

Do we write books so that they shall merely be read? Don't we also write them for employment in the household? For one that is read from start to finish, thousands are leafed through, other thousands lie motionless, others are jammed against mouseholes, thrown at rats, others are stood on, sat on, drummed on, have gingerbread baked on them or are used to light pipes.

Notebook F, aphorism 82

If we make a couple of discoveries here and there we need not believe things will go on like this for ever.... Just as we hit water when we dig in the earth, so we discover the incomprehensible sooner or later.

Notebook F, aphorism 123

What is the good of drawing conclusions from experience? I don't deny we sometimes draw the right conclusions, but don't we just as often draw the wrong ones?

Notebook F, aphorism 47

We say that someone occupies an official position, whereas it is the official position that occupies him.

Notebook K, aphorism 68

The greatest events occur without intention playing any part in them; chance makes good mistakes and undoes the most carefully planned undertaking. The world's greatest events are not produced, they happen.

Notebook B, aphorism 44

If an angel were ever to tell us anything of his philosophy I believe many propositions would sound like 2 times 2 equals 13.

Notebook L, aphorism 81

With most people disbelief in a thing is founded on a blind belief in some other thing.

Notebook C, aphorism 33

Even truth needs to be clad in new garments if it is to appeal to a new age.

Notebook D, aphorism 97

We are obliged to regard many of our original minds as crazy at least until we have become as clever as they are.

Notebook E, aphorism 36

Be wary of passing the judgment: obscure. To find something obscure poses no difficulty: elephants and poodles find many things obscure.

Notebook F, aphorism 53

Doubt must be no more than vigilance, otherwise it can become dangerous.

Notebook F, aphorism 81

There is no more important rule of conduct in the world than this: attach yourself as much as you can to people who are abler than you and yet not so very different that you cannot understand them.

Notebook F, aphorism 73

I have remarked very clearly that I am often of one opinion when I am lying down and of another when I am standing up.

Notebook H, aphorism 4

We accumulate our opinions at an age when our understanding is at its weakest.

Notebook H, aphorism 23

With prophecies the commentator is often a more important man than the prophet.

Notebook G, aphorism 42

The American who first discovered Columbus made a bad discovery.

Notebook H, aphorism 7

The most dangerous untruths are truths slightly distorted.

Notebook B, aphorism 41

People often become scholars for the same reason they become soldiers: simply because they are unfit for any other station. Their right hand has to earn them a livelihood; one might say they lie down like bears in winter and seek sustenance from their paws.

Notebook E, aphorism 91

We do not think good metaphors are anything very important, but I think that a good metaphor is something even the police should keep an eye on...

Notebook H, aphorism 26

Sometimes men come by the name of genius in the same way that certain insects come by the name of centipede -- not because they have a hundred feet, but because most people can't count above fourteen.--

Notebook H, aphorism 65

It is almost impossible to carry the torch of wisdom through a crowd without singeing someone's beard.

Notebook K, aphorism 99

The often unreflected respect for old laws, old customs and old religion we have to thank for all mischief in the world.

Notebook A, aphorism 64

Now that education is so easy, men are drilled for greatness, just as dogs are trained to retrieve. In this way we've discovered a new sort of genius, those great at being drilled. These are the people who are mainly spoiling the market.

Notebook J, aphorism 35

When a book and a head collide and a hollow sound is heard, must it always have come from the book?

[illegible]

Michael Taussig

I swear I saw this: drawings in fieldwork notebooks, namely my own

Not to put too fine a point on it, the notebook becomes not just the guardian of experience but its continuous revision as well, a peculiar and highly specialized organ of consciousness no less than an outrigger of the soul. It becomes an extension of oneself, if not more self than oneself. If a camera is a technical device that more often than not gets in the way—gets between me and people—the diary or fieldwork notebook is a technical device of a very different order and even more magical than the much-acclaimed magic of photography.

Joubert had this gift. He never wrote a book. He only prepared to write one, resolutely seeking the exact conditions that would allow him to write it. Then he forgot even his plan. --Maurice Blanchot

The Notebooks of Joseph Joubert (1883)
As translated by Paul Auster

We comprehend the earth only when we have known heaven. Without the spiritual world the material world is a disheartening enigma.

Some find activity only in repose, and others repose only in movement.

We use up in the passions the stuff that was given us for happiness.

God has commanded time to console the afflicted.

When you go in search of honey you must expect to be stung by bees.

The direction of the mind is more important than its progress.

He who has imagination without learning has wings but no feet.

It is better to debate a question without settling it than to settle a question without debating it.

Ask the young. They know everything.

It is easy to understand God as long as you don't try to explain him.

Pleasures are always children, pains always have wrinkles.

Eyes raised towards Heaven are always beautiful, whatever they be.

Good impulses are naught, unless they become good actions.

All luxury corrupts either the morals or the taste.

When I see young people such as those of our day, I think that Heaven wishes to destroy the world.

To be capable of respect is, in these days, almost as rare as to be worthy of it.

Le génie commence les beaux ouvrages, mais le travail seul les achève.

Genius begins beautiful works, but only labor finishes them.

To teach is to learn twice over.

He who has no poetry in himself will find poetry in nothing.

Thought forms in the soul the same way clouds form in the air.

Perhaps I might tell more. Outlines! I plead for my brothers and sisters.

Do you see O my brothers and sisters?

It is not chaos or death—it is form, union, plan—it is eternal life—it is Happiness.

Part 51

The past and present wilt—I have fill'd them, emptied them.
And proceed to fill my next fold of the future.

Listener up there! what have you to confide to me?
Look in my face while I snuff the sidle of evening,
(Talk honestly, no one else hears you, and I stay only a minute longer.)

Do I contradict myself?
Very well then I contradict myself,
(I am large, I contain multitudes.)

I concentrate toward them that are nigh, I wait on the door-slab.

Who has done his day's work? who will soonest be through with his supper?
Who wishes to walk with me?

Will you speak before I am gone? will you prove already too late?

Part 52

The spotted hawk swoops by and accuses me, he complains of my gab and my loitering.

I too am not a bit tamed, I too am untranslatable,
I sound my barbaric yawp over the roofs of the world.

The last scud of day holds back for me,

It flings my likeness after the rest and true as any on the shadow'd wilds,
It coaxes me to the vapor and the dusk.

I depart as air, I shake my white locks at the runaway sun,
I effuse my flesh in eddies, and drift it in lacy jags.

I bequeath myself to the dirt to grow from the grass I love,
If you want me again look for me under your boot-soles.

You will hardly know who I am or what I mean,
But I shall be good health to you nevertheless,
And filter and fibre your blood.

Failing to fetch me at first keep encouraged,
Missing me one place search another,
I stop somewhere waiting for you.

from
REMEMBERING HAROLD NORSE
by Eddie Woods

Now to flash forward for a moment. Then forward again. Before getting back to the Harold Norse Of Course reading. And its lively aftermath. When I was tidying up Harold's temporary quarters after his departure (not that there was much to tidy, unlike in the wake of Micheline's week-long maelstrom residency in '82!), I discovered a scrap of notepaper filled with seemingly random yet fevered jottings in Harold's hand. Unfortunately I neglected to make a photocopy of said scribbling before sending it off to Stanford University with the rest of my archive. And thus have to paraphrase from memory. But clear memory as to the essence, so penetrating was the impression it left. It went something like: 'Never acknowledged me. Didn't give me credit. The cut-ups. Everything else. My role in his book...' But what mostly stood out was a name: 'Brion.'

Six years later, in Memoirs of a Bastard Angel, Harold would elaborate on this lingering resentment toward an individual for whom he'd initially had warm and admiring feelings:

"Without my prodding and editing, as he admitted, Gysin would not have produced his first writings on cut-ups, which have now become the handbook for the method. It also resulted in his novel The Process. In his writings and interviews no mention is made of this indebtedness...

"If, at Burroughs' insistence, I had not moved into the Beat Hotel, if I hadn't hounded Gysin to write about cut-ups and edited them and gotten them published, would he have written at

"Only you ever encouraged me to the point of bullying, Harold' [Brion later wrote me]. 'You're responsible for THE PROCESS. It grew out of that time you set me to writing something and I obeyed you...I summon you to stir up a controversy and save me on this writing course you set me on, Harold Norse, when you were sitting down there in Room Nine on your rotting vegetables."

"I didn't ask why," Harold continues his narrative. "I already knew. No good deed goes unpunished. He was editing me out."

DECIDUOUS

deciduous \di-'sij-ə-wəs/ adj.

1. BOTANY. Describing plants that lose their leaves annually.
2. ZOOLOGY. Describing animals that shed such things as antlers and hair periodically or such things as wings and teeth at a particular stage of growth.

The trees and shrubs whose tops and roots survive through the winter are divided into two groups, the deciduous group and the evergreen group.

decimal fraction \des-ə-məl 'frak-shən/

MATHEMATICS. A fraction whose denominator is a power of ten. In common notation, the denominator is omitted but is indicated by a decimal point to the left of as many digits as there are zeros in the denominator.

The decimal fraction  $\frac{495}{100}$  is usually written as 4.95, while  $\frac{23}{1,000}$  is written as .023.

decimal system \des-ə-məl 'sis-təm/

MATHEMATICS. A system of counting or of numeration in which ten is used as the base.

A mileage indicator in a car uses the decimal system to indicate the distance the car has traveled.

DECLINATION

declination \di-'klin-ə-'shən/ n.

1. ASTRONOMY. The angular distance of a celestial body north or south of the celestial equator.
2. The angle between a compass needle pointing to magnetic north and a line indicating true north.

A navigator can locate any stellar object by its declination and right ascension.

TELESCOPE

EQUATORIAL MOUNT

DECLINATION AXIS

decompose \di-'kəm-'pōz/

CHEMISTRY. To break up into parts or elements by chemical reaction.

Water will decompose into hydrogen and oxygen if heated to a high-enough temperature.

A shortened term for international date line. See international date line.

daughter cell \ˈdɒt-ər ˈsel\

BIOLOGY. A new cell produced by the division of an older one. A daughter cell is, with rare exception, an exact duplication of its parent.

daughter element \l-ə-mənt\

PHYSICS. A nucleus, that is the immediate result of a radioactive decay.

Radon, daughter of radium, produces its own daughter.

day \ˈdä\ n.

ASTRONOMY. A period of 24 hours, determined by one rotation of the earth; also, the period from dawn until dark; see lunar day, sideral day.

The solar day of 24 hours is approximately the length of time between two successive suns across a meridian.

DC

An abbreviation for direct current. See direct current.

DDT

CHEMISTRY. A colorless insecticide; an abbreviation for dichloro-diphenyl-trichloroethane.

Some species of insects are resistant to the effects of DDT.

dead reckoning \ˈded ˈre-kən-ɪŋ\

AERONAUTICS. A method of determining position by the calculation of position and course, based on speed, estimated drift and other variables.

When a pilot loses radio contact, he must figure his position and course by dead reckoning.

decagon \ˈdek-ə-ˈgæn\ n.

MATHEMATICS. A polygon with ten sides.

The construction of a regular decagon in a circle requires the division of the circle's radius into the golden mean and mean ratio.

And therefore I have the most entire conviction that he called them demons, because they were daemones (knowing or wise), and in our older Attic dialect the word itself occurs. Now he and other poets say truly, that when a good man dies he has honour and a mighty portion among the dead, and becomes a demon; which is a name given to him signifying wisdom. And I say too, that every wise man who happens to be a good man is more than human (daimonion) both in life and death, and is rightly called a demon.
